

1200 COLLEGE ATHLETES COMPLETE NATIONAL MEET AT CAMBRIDGE

Yale Has 146 Entrants, the Largest Number of Any of the Intercollegiate Contenders; Stanford and the University of California Sending Teams East to Enter Meet; Many Have Won High Honors.

NEW YORK, May 16.—More than 1200 athletes are in the hands of the secretary of the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America for the 41st championship games of the association, to be held at Cambridge, Mass., May 24 and 25. Twenty-four colleges and universities, including Stanford and California from the Pacific coast and entered teams and the two day meet in the Harvard stadium promises to be one of the most closely contested in the history of the organization.

Yale leads with 146 entrants. The New Haven university having named the limit number of contestants in a majority of the 12 events, which compose the program of track and field contests. Cornell, the present intercollegiate championship holder, is second with 122 and Princeton third with 111. Michigan is well up in the list with 81 names while Stanford has 72 and California 75. Among the other institutions which have entered are: Harvard, Dartmouth, Princeton, Penn. State, Pennsylvania, Princeton, Syracuse, Yale. The University of Maine also entered a number of athletes but the names were received considerably after the official time set for the closing of the lists and there is some doubt as to whether these entrants will be permitted to start. The California entrants are confined to the two hurdle and five field events. The largest number of entries have been received for the sprints, runs and broad jumps, totalling well over one hundred in each of these contests.

Among the prominent individual entrants, who have earned national or international honors on field and track are the following: Cornell, Shrivver, Shelton, Windmiller, Potter, Hoffman, Starr, Richards, Fox, McCutcheon; Stanford, Fred Murray, Lynn, Apperly, Loefer, Lechman, Wilson, Simon, Campbell; Pennsylvania, Kaufman, Meredith, Lennon, Berry, Nowatlew, Plotsky, Harvard, Treadway, Overton, Lehnert, Bingham, Johnston, Haylock; Michigan, Smith, O'Brien, Oer, Carroll, Caldwell, Nichols, Gildersleeve, Richardson; Yale, Treadway, Overton, Lehnert, Oer, Princeton, Moore, Barrett, Plotsky, Dartmouth, Worthington and Miner; Syracuse, Curtis and White; Penn. Fighters Laugh At Weight Limits

Champions Fight At Any Poundage

NEW YORK, May 16.—The farcical extremes to which the pugilistic game has gone is shown by the fact that three of the four champions actually have outgrown their class. They have refused to fight at the standard American weights for their divisions, and therefore, are not legitimate title holders.

"Kid" Williams, Johnny Kilbane and Freddie Welsh are the subjects of our inky conversation. American heavyweight limit is 116 pounds, but Williams balks at making it. He will do 120 or 122 but 116? Nix! The featherweight displacement is 125, but about the only way in which Kilbane could make it would be to huff off a leg or an arm.

Kilbane is in the lightweight class. He has averaged 125 pounds in most of his recent bouts. He weighed 129 pounds in his last fight in New York—seven pounds above the limit of his division. George Chantey wanted Kilbane to make 125 pounds ringside for a fight with him. That allowed Kilbane three pounds above the prescribed limit. But Kilbane refused.

Freddie Welsh absolutely ignores the fact that he is in the next weight limit. Welsh fights at any weight that suits him—and that is around 137 or 138. Welsh, if forced, might make 125 pounds ringside, but it would leave him weakened beyond fighting condition.

But those three blunders upon their foes observing the rules and regulations governing weights. They rarely will fight a real contender unless he "goes" them from three to seven pounds. What is fair for a champion does not seem to be other than foul when done by a challenger.

The fault lies in the fact that there is no national boxing board to regulate pugilistic activities. It is the only major sport that lacks such organization. Baseball, tennis, golf, bowling, horse racing, basketball and the other sports are governed by a national body. But boxing is without an authoritative head.

Various states and cities have boxing commissions, which govern in a half-hearted way in their own sections. But they have not accomplished anything in the way of forcing fighters to battle at legitimate weights under penalty of forfeiting their titles.

As long as this country lacks a national commission, just as long will the fighters run the mitt game to suit themselves. They pump their fingers at the orders from the state and city boxing governments. They know that if they don't like the rules that exist in one city they can move on to the next where there is no such board, or one that has rules less strict.

An instance of the uselessness of a state boxing commission, as regards enforcement of the weight limit rules is shown by the New York State boxing commission. This body tried for a time to force champions to fight at the prescribed American weights. It failed in its efforts. Then it voluntarily boosted the limit two pounds in each division, figuring that with this show of liberality it surely could force the champions to fight at the new limits.

The New York state limits are: Bantamweight, 118; feather, 124; light, 125; welter, 144; against the American limits of 116, 122, 126 and 142.

An ever since then the champions have been fighting at any old weight they saw fit—and those always were well below the new and liberal limits fixed by the commission. That showed how much they think of the commission and its law, shows how tightly they regard any rules that conflict with their ideas.

What has been done in the past by the boxers and is being done now will be continued in the future: will be done until such time as a national boxing commission is formed to govern—with an iron hand—the doing of the batters out of the present pugilistic chaos, and lift the game to a higher standard than it rests upon now.

Unfortunately, that day is far distant.
